

In-class assignments

- Please write a Python program that allows the user to enter any number of floating-point values. The program terminates user's input only when a zero is provided. The program then prints the average (arithmetic mean), maximum, and minimum of the positive values entered. Any negative values are ignored and not used in the computations.